Description

If I switch a projects repository type, e.g. from git to archive, the existing jenkins settings for the git repository are not overridden. (The name of the project stays the same.)

I believe I have seen a similar issue for the transition from svn to git (or vice versa).

Archive aspect removes repository in src/project/aspects.lisp

fixes #2654

Previously, updating a existing job with a repository configuration to use an archive download did not remove the repository configuration.

- lib/jenkins.api/src/api/classes.lisp (credentials scm/null): new method; empty credentials list for null scm
- lib/jenkins.api/src/api/package.lisp (package jenkins.api): added exported symbol scm/null
- src/project/aspects.lisp (define-aspect archive): install `scm/null' repository

You mean the repository section in the previously generated job is not deleted?

I don't understand this part. Are you mentioning this in order to make clear that the name of the generated job does not change?

That transition would be slightly different, though.
